NEW YORK WEDNESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 24, 1845.

Washington, Saturday Evening, September 20, 1845. An Afternoon Journal to "Arlington." The Seat of G. P. Custis, Esq.—Bird's-eye View described.

The most agreeable point that we have made for years, for recreation, novelty, and profitable instruction, was our visit to-day to "Arlington," the venerable seat of the venerable George Washington Parke Custis, Esq., on the green heights across the Potomac river from Washington.

Interesting from HAYTI.—We have received by the way of Philadelphia the following intelligence from Hayti.

CAPE HAYTIEN, Sept. 10, 1845.—Capt. Trayward, of schooner Baltimore, who takes this, and who arrived here from Port Spain, Trinidad, or the 20th ult., reported to the Dominicans that a small schooner, a frontier port, about ten leagues to windward of this.

On the 25th ult., an "Arrete" was published here by the President, declaring all the Dominicans ports blockaded, and that no vessel should be allowed to enter or leave the ports, except by the express permission of the President.

Brooklyn City Intelligence.

Two Great Processions. A large number of militia regiments commenced in this city on Monday last, and will be continued until all the different regiments shall have been drilled.

Curious Neglect. It is stated that the public cemetery, at the corner of Tillary and Pearl streets, several weeks ago, is yet unfilled; so that if another funeral should occur in that vicinity, the remains of the deceased would have to be interred elsewhere.

Pickpockets. At the Temperance meeting on Monday evening, officers Felt and Hayes arrested a young man who was carrying a large number of stolen articles.

More Light Fingers. A number of the "Star Club of Brooklyn" yesterday, and several attempts were made upon the streets of Brooklyn, to obtain possession of the "Star Club" of Brooklyn.

Police Officer. Ellen Flynn, charged with stealing money from Mr. Gerrit Brown, of Gowanus, her late employer, was examined before Justice Downing.

William Morris entered into surety to take his trial at the next Court of General Sessions, to appear at the trial of the case of Morris vs. Brown.

Timothy Green, arrested for committing a breach of the peace, was committed to the custody of the Sheriff.

A beautiful but frail woman named Barbara McBratney, was committed to the custody of the Sheriff.

Supposed to be an unknown man was yesterday found, and was taken to the police station.

A meeting took place at the residence of Mr. Preston, on Monday last, for the purpose of organizing a new militia regiment.

Between seven and eight o'clock on Monday night, Mr. George W. Turner, a printer, about thirty-five years of age, threw himself from one of the windows of the building.

Continued from page 1. The most interesting of the season has been the distribution of premiums. Most of the elegances returned for their claimants to attend to the interesting exercises of their children, their progress or distinctions absorb now-days, almost the entire time of our Parisian mothers. At the most eminent colleges, there are no uniforms, no hats, and no gowns, and no inferior in number or distinction, to the crowded salons in winter. Young ladies are dressed in white and colored tulle, and embroidered in white and gold, in consequence of the unusual cool weather, most of the ladies wore mantles and pompadour dresses and cashmires, printed on elegant designs, in seven or eight rich bright colors. Some wore designs printed on white ground, with bright colors, such as yellow, blue, bright green, and green, but beautifully blended together; no cross or other designs were worn by gentlemen, but they are decidedly vulgar, and have far common, being worn by the street singers, porters, &c. Velvet hats will be worn with a profusion of feathers, with inside flowers, they being the most graceful ornament that can be imagined, and which makes Parisians, who wear more than any other women, so gracefully dressed about the streets. The ladies and cashmere dresses are worn low in the neck and open in front to display beautiful embroidered chemises and garters. Well dressed lady is now distinguished by the richness of her dress, and the quality of her grand mothers were for silks, being now produced in admirable soft tissues, printed in rich designs and in colors that can be produced in no other way, and more becoming for the autumn than silks, and much more durable; and are now worn promiscuously, evening and day, as they hang in more graceful folds about the person.
